March 2017

Dear Friends of the Philharmonic Society of Arlington,

As a non-profit organization, the Philharmonic Society of Arlington is dedicated to providing the people of Arlington and its neighboring towns with the opportunity to participate in and to hear collaborative music made by experienced musicians. Our open, non-audition membership represents a diverse inter-generational group of music makers who have a proud heritage of introducing our audiences to new music, often from local composers.

You, our contributors, sponsors, and advertisers, make this possible. Each year, we depend on you to ensure we are able to continue this remarkable musical tradition. We need you, not only as avid listeners at our concerts and enthusiastic performing members, but also as patrons who provide continuing funding for our annual operating expenses.

We hope you will choose to be recognized as a PSA sponsor or as an advertiser in our Yearbook. Display ads of any size and content are available. (See the attached form for details.) Our annual yearbook is distributed at all concerts and events in which the Philharmonic participates. Sponsors and advertisers are honored at our annual Sponsors' Concert. We invite you to attend this joint concert of the Arlington Philharmonic Orchestra and the Arlington-Belmont Chorale at the First Parish Unitarian-Universalist Church in Arlington Center on April 30th and please join us for a reception celebrating our sponsors and advertisers following the concert. We hope to see you there!

With its opening concert of this season, the Arlington Philharmonic Orchestra introduced its new, exciting, and innovative Music Director, Orlando Cela, under whose baton the Orchestra has recently expanded its outreach beyond Arlington with a special concert at The Center for the Arts at the Armory in Somerville.

Your support allows the P.S.A. to now provide nine concerts per year, more than any other non-professional musical organization in the area. We are very proud of that fact and you should be too. For more information about all of our concerts, please visit our website at psarlington.org, and thank you for your continuing support.

Sincerely,

JACK CONNORS, President
The Philharmonic Society of Arlington
